King; defendant's solicitor, J. L. Neill.

Much criticism of Capt. Davenport was heard throughout the naval service. After his return to the United States Capt. Davenport applied for admission to membership in the New York Yacht Club, but was rejected on account of the allegations concerning his conduct in Samoa. He thereupon applied to the Navy Department for a court of honor, whose report tended to exonerate him. His application for admission to the yacht club was then received, and he was admitted.

Recently Capt. Davenport became involved in a controversy with the chaplain of his present command, the battle ship Georgia. The chapitain complained that Capt. Davenport would not permit him to hold religious services, and the Navy Department called Capt. Davenport to account, and directed that the chaplain be allowed to have his way. Capt. Davenport was born in the District of Columbia, and appointed to the Naval Academy from Georgia in 1894.

Case of Capt. Buil.

Capt. Bull's retirement was due to severe injuries received by him while he was on duty at the Pan-American Exponents of the property of sition in Buffalo, in 1301. He fell from the top of a building and broke both legs. He never fully recovered from the injury. Capt. Bell was born in Pennsylvania, and was appointed to the Naval Academy from that State in 1996. He commands the naval training station at San Fran-

He did excellent work in purchasing foreign warships for the United States navy in England and on the continent, navy in England and on the continent, working directly under instructions from Theodore Roosevelt, then Assistant Secretary of the Navy. Until recently he commanded the cruiser Denver. He was born in Pennsylvania, and received an "at large" appointment to the Naval Academy in 1870, a niece of the first Mrs. Benjamin Harrison, and a sister of the widow of the President, who was Mrs. Mary Scott Dimmick. In the Harrison administra-tion he was naval aid to the President and stationed at the White House. Kalation he was naval aid to the President and stationed at the White House. Kalakaua, King of Hawail, was a great friend of Commander Parker, and the king, who was taken ill while visiting this country, passed away in the naval officer's arms in San Francisco. Commander Parker was very popular here in the Harrison administration. At the outbreak of the war with Spain he was in charge of the naval patrol of New York harbor. He entered the Naval Academy from Ohlo, his native State, in 1870.
